And my love was like the moon

When my world was dark he lit the starless skies

And my hopes for what I'd be

While his faith still lived in me

Shone reflected in his eyes

And my love was like the moon

And the phases of his mood would wax and wane

And he had his darker side

And he chose what he would hide

And concealed his deepest pain

He was like the speed of light, always sure when he was right

And I knew he'd never change

He was like the value pi, though predictions I might try

Still his code was always strange

And my love was like the sun

And he always kept me warm when day was through

Burning with his fusion's fire

Blending passion with desire

Making one soul out of two

And my love was like the sun

Though he's gone his blazing image fills my sight

Dazzled still, and left behind

I am groping as though blind

And can scarce tell dark from light

Like a pitch too high to hear, he enhanced what he was near

Everything seemed sharp and bright

Like the golden section, phi, his proportions could not lie

Every part of him was right

And my love was like the sea

I was rocked to peaceful sleep upon his waves

And he brought before my eyes, as a diver brings his prize

Many gifts my heart still craves

And my love was like the sea

And his depths held secrets I could never know

Needs unfathomably deep, longings that I could not keep

And I had to let him go
